

OncoMed (OMED)

Positive Update at Biocentury Conf., Incremental Vantictumab Update at ESMO

Key Takeaway

OMED presented on Friday at the Biocentury conference in NYC highlighting its developmental progress with lead product candidate demcizumab, new positive data to be presented at the AACR-NCI-EORTC meeting in October, and a new pipeline program using a bispecific antibody to target both a cancer stem cell target combined with an immune check point target.

Biocentury Update: Positive Data To Be Presented At AACR-NCI-EORTC in October – New Bispecific Antibody Targeting Immunotherapy To Be Unveiled.

At the upcoming AACR-EORTC-NCI meeting, Oncomed will present five abstracts, but highlighted the new update on the first-in-human Fzld8-Fc program for cancer, where management indicated that single-agent proof-of-concept activity has been demonstrated. We believe this could validate the program and raise investor interest around this target. Separately, we believe the company is encouraged by initial data on truncated demcizumab dosing with gemcitabine and Abraxane in pancreatic cancer, although these data will not be presented until the ASCO GI meeting in early 2014. The third new update from the company at Biocentury was the development of a preclinical stage drug, which we assume employs the company's bispecific antibody technology, to target both a cancer stem cell target, presumably a Notch or wnt target, along with an immune check point target, one of the hottest areas of cancer research currently. The company indicated that preclinical data suggest a role of Notch in downstream T cell regulation and synergy with immune check point targets, such as PD-1.

Vantictumab Program Update At ESMO. OMED presented updated Ph1a data for anti-Fzd7 vantictumab at the ESMO meeting on Sunday. Specifically, 29 patients with advanced and refractory solid tumors were treated with single-agent vantictumab up to the current dose of 15mg/kg every three weeks, which was above the target efficacious dose based on a human tumor xenograft model. We are encouraged by single agent activity observed to date in neuroendocrine tumors. Based on the safety profile for vantictumab seen in this trial, OMED expects to advance vantictumab into three Phase 1b trials later this year.

OMED Highlights Extended Lock-Up Agreement. OMED reminded investors that management and investors signed an extended lock-up agreement that would prolong the time post-IPO before these parties could sell shares. Specifically, unlike the typical six-month lockup post-IPO, these early investors would be unable to sell more than 25% of their shares before 6 months, 75% before 12 months, or 100% before 18 months. We note the highly unusual nature of this prolonged lock-up and believe that the early investors willingness to sign on to such a restrictive program could be suggestive of their committed belief in the long-term value of the OMED story.
